faith communities
committed to nonviolent discipleship

Church and Peace members

- understand the call in the Sermon on the Mount to seek God's kingdom and righteousness and to proclaim in word and deed God's good news of reconciliation and peace as defining tasks for the Church and its members;
- find the embodiment of this kingdom in the life, death and resurrection of Jesus Christ:
 - healing and transforming broken lives;
 - confronting violence with the power of love;
 - restoring just relations - personal, societal, with God and Creation; challenging unjust systems and structures with an attitude of service, an economics of sharing, and a strategy of nonviolent transformation;
- seek to walk in nonviolent discipleship as a committed body of believers.

Church and Peace wishes to empower communities of Christ's followers today to be places where his peace is lived out in a visible way.

To date groups and individuals from 11 European countries and the Mennonite, Quaker, Church of the Brethren, Anglican, Methodist, Moravian, Lutheran, Orthodox, Reformed and Roman Catholic traditions have committed themselves to journeying together as Church and Peace.
